Miguel speech team takes 2nd at national qualifier

Nine Mount Miguel High School speech students led the charge to a second-place sweepstakes trophy at the National Forensic Southern California District Qualifying contest in Long Beach last weekend.

Three students have earned the right to attend the national finals June 15-20 in St. Louis, Mo.

Qualifying in Original Oratory were Danielle Saullo and Doug Brown. Both are seniors and ranked first and second, respectively, with their speeches entitled "Procrastination" and "Carpe Diem."

Matt Agosta, a junior, qualified in Humorous with material entitled "Attack of the Moral Fuzzies." Saullo and Brown also teamed up to place first in Duo Interpretation with their selection from "Torch Song Trilogy."

In addition to these three top winners, the following students were also trophy winners and added to the overall sweepstakes: Jason Hoover (sophomore) third place in Humorous; Deja Early (sophomore) 5th place in Original Oratory; Aysha Davis (junior) 6th place in Original Oratory; and Aysha Davis with Matt Agosta, 3rd place in Duo Interpretation.

Miguel's next contest will be the California State Finals May 1-3 in Stockton.

Miguel has qualified 15 students. Each of the students listed above will, also, attend the state finals. Chamber's lack of funds adds up to layoff for executive director

by Cheryl Cohen

When the new Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce president, Jim Butcher, saw the balance in the chamber's checkbook, he saw the writing on the wall — there wasn't enough money to pay Executive Director Mary England for another month.

The lay-off wasn't any surprise to England, who has known the inevitable since the postponement of the chamber's main fundraiser last October. The chamber's other money-raising activities wouldn't be enough to sustain her four-hour-a-day paycheck, no matter how many 10 - 12 hour days she put in.

England dragged Lemon Grove's chamber kicking and screaming into the spotlight with her persuasive maneuvering and gold lame handbags. Before they knew what hit them, business owners and city officials found themselves collaborating on everything from permit processes to the Superbowl.

Somewhere between steamroller-ish and demure, she never let an opportunity pass to hit up a business — anywhere in the county — for a chamber membership or door prize donation, and they were glad to give it to her.

She changed the face of her sleepy little chamber into a powerful lobbying force for her business community. She was, and still is, very proud of their new "proactive" reputation.

Chamber Executive Director Mary England will make her final appearance at next week's "Gold Rush Fever" casino night.

Can the chamber hang on to that precious status now that England is out? According to her, it's up to the board of directors.

"I feel confident that I've left them enough of a foundation, that they can continue if the board chooses to," she said. "But, I'm not going to be there, hand-holding."

Keeping things status quo might be more of a job than the board realizes, as most of their progress has been singularly due to England's tireless efforts. The reason their "Gold Rush Fever" casino night fund-raiser was postponed from last October until next week (April 18), is because the board of directors only sold a handful of tickets for the event.

Although she forged ahead with other efforts, she was notably discouraged by the lack of support from her board.

The fact that England has been the power behind the chamber's metamorphosis has never been lost on those who dealt with her on a first-hand basis.

"She was that little spark — no, make that the big spark that kept things moving," said Mayor Mary Sessom.

Councilman Craig Lake agrees.

"The chamber had really accelerated because of her efforts, and it's going to be a big loss for them," he said.

Jim Butcher is hopeful that they will be able to bring England back to work in May. He says there are some membership dues coming in and with the upcoming casino night, there might be enough money if they can get creative with England's compensation.

Trouble is, she may not be around. England is being actively courted by several governmental offices and private industry boards of directors.

She also has her own business, Superior Marketing Concepts, and is retired from 30 years of service with the charitable fundraising arm of Pacific Bell. She has a veritable banquet table of opportunity open to her now that she is available.

Without England, what does the future hold for Lemon Grove's Chamber?

"I think the board is stepping up now," Butcher said. "We've redefined our positions and what our responsibilities are. This board will be expected to put time in on the fundraisers."

While he's sure England's lay off will have an impact on the organization, he doesn't see an option right now.

"What are you going to do?" he said. "You can't borrow money and put yourself in a negative position."

England has volunteered her efforts since her layoff in preparation for the "Gold Rush Fever" fundraiser, but looks forward to a brief hiatus before her next efforts elsewhere.

England's favorite saying, "This isn't your mother's chamber," never rang more true than it does now.

Historical Society hopes to save valuable artifacts from the clutches of yard sales

by Bob Burns

If you would like to see volunteerism at work, see what can be accomplished by willing hands and heartfelt enthusiasm, and get a thrill in seeing a community treasure restored, go to the corner of Olive and Church streets.

The Atherton Chapel, or "Parsonage," is the new home of the Lemon Grove Historical Society. For the first time, the group held its monthly meeting in the Parsonage last week. Much of the meeting involved how the restoration is progressing.

"Renaissance," was the word used by Vice-president Helen Ofield, noting that "restoration" would mean putting the place in the same form as the original building. Some changes are necessary to bring it up to modern codes and safety.

Ofield explained the plans towards the completion of the museum. The landscaping plan still must be passed on by the city, but the Angels walk has been laid out to begin at the front door.

A multitude of bricks, each inscribed with the donor's name, will stretch outward to cover a vast area. The bricks are $100 each and there are still many available. The first batch will be ordered soon, so those wishing to get a brick, may call 462-6494.

Money and materials are still needed to finish the job and new members are always welcome.

The society is looking for anything that depicts a part of Lemon Groves history, including old photographs, newspapers and books with information pertaining to "Old Lemon Grove."

The public is being urged not to throw away historic remnants, nor put them on a garage sale table. The Historical Society would love dearly to have those things to preserve in the museum.

Another project that is currently being conducted is the taping of the "oral history," conversations with long-time residents.

Dorothy Kaupe would like to tape conversations with senior residents of the community that would reflect the past. She will provide the recorder and schedule the session at the subject's convenience.

While today's civic leaders look to future dreams for Lemon Grove, including the possible formation of a community center comprising the Lee House across the street and the adjoining church building, the Historical Society urges people, young and old, to preserve all that we can from the past.

For more information on the society and its many projects, call 462-6494.

Lemon Twist

by Cheryl Cohen

Bruce Henderson couldn't do it. Craig Lake couldn't do it. But, your lovely city attorney, Gloria McLean, was able to strong-arm county counsel into capitulating to the request of the writ filed by the mayor to eliminate the ballot statement requesting Lemonites to pay for the 800 MHz Regional Communications System through their property taxes, worded in such a manner as to suggest that they'd been paying for it all along. Councilman Craig Lake wasn't saying much, except that HE wishes they'd given HIM the same treatment when HE tried to change HIS own ballot statement during the last campaign. Some people just don't get no respect!

So — do I really have to point out the ridiculousness in the "Letter to the Editor" which started out lambasting the "vicious negative campaigning," and then went on to get vicious and negative about the campaigning? I didn't think so.

Dirk's Horseshoe Lounge is happy to report that its "outside patio is getting much closer," and thanks everyone for their patience. I've heard of moving sidewalks, but this is a new one on me. Mark your calendars for May 2, and get over there dressed up in costume for their Halloween II party, complete with cash prizes. Come dressed up like a cigarette smoker and win a trip (right outside to that moving patio in the back).

Outraged to hear that Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce's Executive Director Mary "Boom-Boom" England has been laid off? Blame it on the holidays, says President Jim Butcher. "We couldn't hang on to Mary because we had to pay for our huge yacht party," he quipped. Don't let Jim's wacky behavior fool you; he's dead serious about his partying. Watch him in action at the chamber's Gold Rush Fever casino night, April 18 at the Lemon Grove Senior Center, 7 p.m.-11 p.m. There'll be the usual no-host cocktails, something called "Casino War," a silent auction and great food served by Nick and his Top Hat Catering bunch.

The new president of the Lemon Grove Project, Chuck Pennell, reports that outgoing president Karen "Z" Zaustinsky is leaving El Limon Grande for Las Vegas, where she should be quite busy trying to get them to stop selling alcohol where they give it away.

Back here on the home front, Chuck tried to embark on a campaign against overdoses of sunblock, but was voted down. The LGP will now look toward collaborating with the city on a town hall meeting in early summer, complete with speakers, crime statistics and no-host drugs served in the vacant Super Saver store parking lot.

Hey, speaking of vacant buildings, the East County Economic Development Council (ECEDC) (you remember — the ones who brought you the vapor-site on the Internet?) is getting ready for its annual "East County Prosperity Month," and has reportedly already done a dry-run of the infamous 97-hour bus tour of East County.

You may have seen the bus parked out front of Little Darlings, as it was the centerpiece of the drive-by of Lemon Grove last year. Then again, it's the "destination theatre" to many visitors to the city, and, why not? Who needs Ben Cipranic and his big movie theaters when you've got the "Polympics" right here? (Manager Extraordinaire, Tawnia Hubler tells me they considered having some men doing the dancing over there once in awhile, but didn't think it would be a very pretty sight. It all depends on your perspective, Tawnia. And, I'd like mine to be from a seat right in front of the stage).

Although the ECEDC must have forgotten to send me a press kit this year, I have to say they were generous enough to send a letter about my hitchhiker story a coupla months back in our "Car Wars" issue, saying they were glad I was spared from the terrible ordeal. Would you believe that the real story was that I was on a very long bus tour, and it was me who held the knife!

Send your wild stories to the Review, or directly to me at 619-264-3153 (msg), 264-4180 (fax), or e-mail me at cirious@cts.com. Then, just relax. We'll drive.

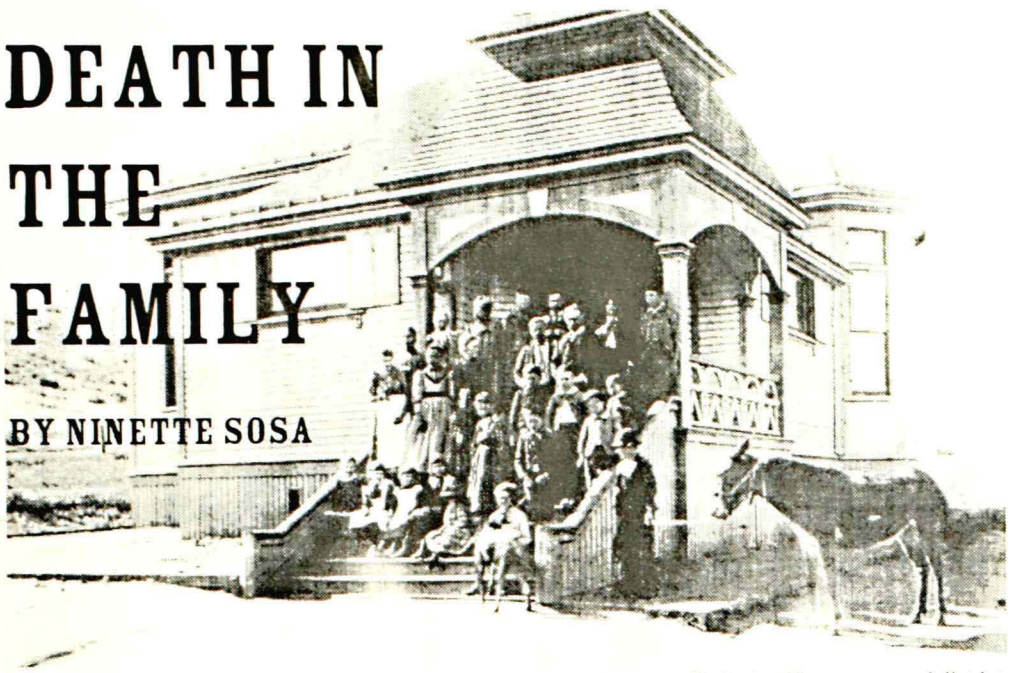
DEATH IN THE FAMILY



BY NINETTE SOSA

Nineteen-year-old Nicholas Chavez and Robert Valenzuela, 18, were killed by a man who claimed to be defending his family. This happened on March 9 in La Mesa.

Jason Nutt, a West Hills High School graduate, lost his life when he and his friends were partying in the desert. They were high on mushrooms they had eaten on beds of marshmallows.

More recent, a 19-year-old doused himself with paint thinner and burned himself to death in a riverbed near Santee's Towne Center Parkway.

Whatever the cause of death — guns, drugs or suicide — family members, friends and even witnesses are left to ponder why and how something so tragic could have happened.

The county doesn't have all the answers, but apparently there is some good news. A recent report by the Suicide Homicide Audit Committee (SHAC) shows a 22-percent decrease in the number of youth deaths due to intentional violence since 1995.

In 1996, 74 youth died from intentional violence in San Diego County. The SHAC, a multi-agency committee convened by county Health and Human Services, meets monthly to review the violent death of youth suicides and homicides.

Of the 74 cases reviewed, 32 were looked over in detail. The committee found that 26 of the 32 cases were "intervenable," suggesting they could have been avoided had there been intervention by an agency, family or county policy.

In December of 1996, the SHAC prepared its first report of youth deaths, punctuated by an impressive but sad mountain of shoes filling the Board of Supervisors chambers: shoes of youth who had died. The ceremony was led by the Children's Initiative co-chair and former National Teacher of the Year, Sandra McBrayer.

For this year's presentation of the SHAC report, children from various schools around the county filled the chamber room and thanked each supervisor.

Those who prepared the report say that the $1.2 million the supervisors allocated for the development and implementation of a Critical Hours Program for middle school youth helped deter them from violence — whether self-inflicted or violence towards another person.

Some 2,200 students have taken advantage of one of the 27 Critical Hours programs since its inception last September.

Every suicide or homicide of a person between the ages of 8 - 24 years is reported to the SHAC for review. Information is gathered from a variety of agencies such as the county Medical examiner, Probation Department and district attorney. From there, SHAC formulates recommendations and conclusions.

Here are some highlights from the latest SHAC report.

1996 Suicides Ages 8 - 19. There were 19 suicides with a rate of 4.38 suicides for every 100,000 persons. Seventeen were male, and two were female. African Americans and Asians were over-represented, with around a 15-percent suicide rate while representing only 7.8 and 9.7 percent of the population, respectively.

Firearms were used in 73 percent of the cases, with six of the guns were owned by a victim's parent.

Nearly 30 percent had alcohol in their systems. Almost one-quarter tested positive for methamphetamine.

All the suicides occurred in the youth's residence. The major contributing factors in the deaths were a history of drug/alcohol abuse and conflict with a parent.

1996 Suicides Ages 8 - 24. There were 40 suicides with a rate of 6.17 suicides for every 100,000 persons.

The percentage of female suicides increased from 16 percent to 23 percent, even though there was a 19-percent overall decrease in suicides.

Firearms were used in 56 percent of all cases. Females used firearms in two-thirds of the cases and males used firearms 52 percent of the time. More than half of the victims had no drugs or alcohol in their system. Thirteen percent tested positive for methamphetamine.

1996 Homicides Ages 8 - 19. There were 13 homicides with a rate of nearly three homicides for every 100,000 persons.

All were male. There were no white males in this group Hispanics made up 77 percent of the cases.

Five were gang related. Firearms were used in 92 percent of the cases. The majority of the cases occurred on the street.

1996 Homicides Ages 8 - 24. There were 34 homicides with a rate of 5.24 homicide for every 100,000 persons.

Of the homicides, 32 were male and two were female. Overall, homicides decreased by 44 percent, as compared to 1995 figures.

Hispanics represented 53 percent of the cases.

Firearms were used in nearly 80 percent of the cases. More than 40 percent tested positive for alcohol. Twenty-six percent tested positive for methamphetamine.

SHAC found that all youth suicides occurred at home, all homicide victims were males of color and firearms were used in the vast majority of youth suicide and homicide cases.

Case discussion focused on whether there was an opportunity to intervene and possibly prevent the suicide or homicide from happening.

Findings were divided in the following categories:

- Intervenable — potential opportunity exists to intervene at the agency, individual/family and public policy levels.
- Not Intervenable — no opportunity exists to intervene.
- Undetermined — unable to determine if intervention opportunity exists based on the limited information available to the committee.

In deaths occurring in 1996 for youths between the ages of 8-19, 32 cases were reviewed. Twenty-six were found to be intervenable, one was not intervenable and five were undetermined.

One major objective for the SHAC is establishing a learning process among family-serving agencies to determine how they function separately and what potential collaborative opportunities exist to prevent youth suicides and homicides.

SHAC would also like to collect data from various agencies on youth who are the victims of suicide and homicide for the purpose of evaluating frequency and type of encounter of the youth and their families.

The committee hopes to eventually craft and implement long-term strategies and solutions to minimize of eliminate unnecessary death among youths.

High School journalists show on-the-spot abilities at countywide write-off contest

Graffiti may seem like vandalism to law enforcement and the business community, but it's just good, old American free speech.

At least, that was the argument proposed by Jaime Wilson-Chira, the Valhalla High School student who won first place in editorial writing at last month's Journalism Write-off.

Wilson-Chira was among 20 high school journalists from East County who won awards for writing, photography and cartooning at the annual competition sponsored by the San Diego County Journalism Education Association.

Grossmont High School's Foothills Echoes placed seventh in the awards for best overall newspaper. The Valhalla Saga produced enough winners to take second in the newspaper sweepstakes.

Students were given presentations in large groups and then sent to write on-the-spot news, opinion or feature stories. Working professionals then judged the entries, also on the spot.

Award winners in news writing included Valhalla's Heidi Newberry (2nd place), West Hills High School's Clint Whited (5th), Granite Hills High School's Kelley Ferguson (10th) and Helix High School's Katie Arnston (12th).

Behind Wilson-Chira in editorial writing were Helix's Katherine Plog (2nd), Valhalla's Bobby Owsley (7th), Granite Hills' Matthew Svoboda (8th), Mount Miguel High School's Karina Carrillo (15th), Granite Hills' Savy Hak (16th), and Sylvia Smasal (17th) and Michelle Gatdula (18th), both from Helix.

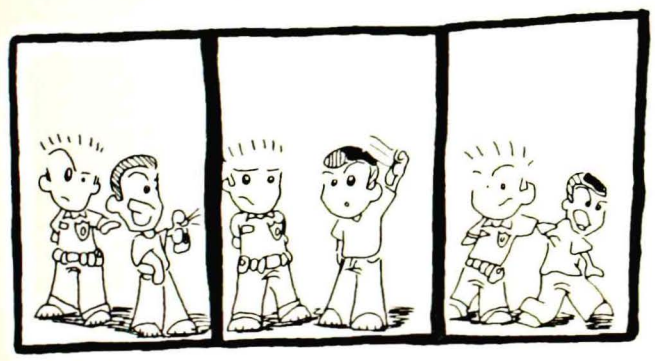
The sole winner in feature story writing was Adam Cole (8th) from Valhalla.

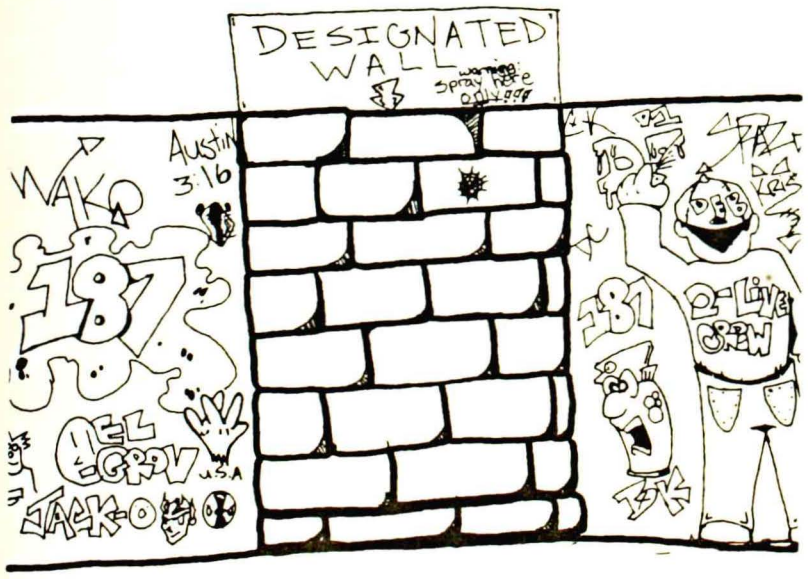
Winning sportswriters were Eric Patten (17th) from Granite Hills, and Kenon Nibbs (9th) and Hillary Bryant (novice) from Valhalla.

Editorial cartoonists taking awards were Tony Yousif (9th) from Valhalla, and Mount Miguel's Andy Urzua (8th) and Chris Terry (13th).

Valhalla's Jennifer Willcuts was the sole photography standout, taking second place.

The winners will go on to compete in the May 2 write-offs sponsored by the California Journalism Education Association.





East County cartoonists winning awards included sophomore Andy Urzua (top) and freshman Chris Terry. Both attend Mount Miguel High School.

Spring volunteers sought to help injured wildlife

Project Wildlife is gearing up for San Diego County's annual baby season. Over the next year, Project Wildlife will receive more than 9,000 baby birds and mammals.

Volunteers are needed to care for injured and orphaned wildlife four hours per week at the Project Wildlife Care Facility in San Diego. Volunteers are also needed to care for baby birds and mammals in their own homes.

Rescue and transport volunteers and telephone volunteers are in demand, too.

"The wildlife baby season is an extremely busy period of time," said Lyn Lacye, spokeswoman for Project Wildlife. "Each year with tree trimming being undertaken at the wrong time of the year with encroaching development, more and more of our feathered and furry friends get into trouble and need human help."

Lacye said there are many ways to aid efforts to save San Diego's native wildlife. Individuals who are home during the day can be trained in the care and feeding of baby songbirds and mammals.

Dependable people are needed to volunteer four hours a week at the Project Wildlife Care Facility, which is open seven days a week, 12 hours per day.

In some areas, the Project Wildlife phone number can be call-forwarded to a volunteer's home for four hours each week, and calls can be directed to the volunteer staff.

Lacye said that people who find baby birds or mammals should be sure they are really orphaned before attempting a rescue.

"Many species leave their young while out searching for food," she said. "Be sure the parents are not returning to feed. There is no substitute for the real parent."

Contrary to popular mythology, a baby bird that has fallen from the nest can be put back. Lacye said. The parents will continue to feed it.

If the nest is out of reach, the fallen bird can be placed in a plastic bowl lined with tissue or paper towels as close as possible to the original site. The parents will usually find the baby within 90 minutes.

When rescue becomes necessary, the bird or animal should be handled as little as possible. Often these otherwise healthy creatures die of stress.

Lacye said rescuers should keep the animal or bird warm, dark and quiet, and call Project Wildlife.

Wildlife should not be fed without advise from a trained volunteer. Baby birds and mammals can easily inhale food into their lungs and die, and incorrect diet can cause irreparable damage.

Project Wildlife is a non-profit, volunteer organization, which has been in existence since 1976. Its goal is the rescue and care of San Diego County's native wildlife which have been injured, orphaned or displaced, and the release of rehabilitated animals back into their natural habitat.

More than 9,000 animals and birds are brought to Project Wildlife each year. Project Wildlife is funded by membership donations and charitable contributions.

New volunteers will receive specialized training in their selected caregiving and supplies will be provided. For more information, call 579-5083.

Oops!

Last week, a group of concerned citizens sent us a letter about the upcoming city council election ["Let the negative campaigning begin." April 2 issue]. The letter referred to an unnamed council candidate the writers believe is guilty of "mean-spirited non-leadership."

The third paragraph then suddenly stated, "Aside from our obstructionist grandstanding at council meetings ..." The word "our" seemed to refer back to the letter writers, but this was an error on our part. The original letter continued in the same tense, referring to "his obstructionist grandstanding." We regret the typographical error, and we'll make sure it never happens again!

Board offers storm repair tips

As El Niño-related storms come to a close and spring approaches, thousand of Californians will be involved in home improvement projects. Whether it's repairing and rebuilding storm-damaged homes, or planning spring remodeling projects, the Contractors State License Board has the following tips to homeowners as they enter into contracting relationships.

According to California law, any construction project priced over $300 in total labor and materials required a contractor to be licensed in the trade or occupation of the work being done. Licensed contractors must verify at least four years of journey-level experience in the craft and pass a comprehensive trade and licensed law examination.

The following "red flags" should warn consumers when hiring a contractor this spring.

- The contractor who wants a cash payment up-front.
- The contractor who says he or she needs a big down payment to buy materials.
- The contractor who says he or she can begin work immediately before assessing water damage or the remodeling project.
- the contractor who pressures you to hire him or her today.
- the contractor who says he can save you money because he's not licensed.

The Contractor's State License Board was established in 1929 and operates under the umbrella of the California Department of consumer Affairs. The board licenses and regulates the state's 278,000 construction contractors.

'All My Sons' to open at Lamplighters

The Lamplighters Community Theatre presentation of "All My Sons" will open at 8 p.m. on April 17 at the Theatre, 8053 University Ave., La Mesa

The story is concerned with the fortunes of the Keller and Deever families. During the war, Joe Keller and Herbert Deever ran a machine shop which made airplane parts. Deever was sent to prison because the firm turned out defective parts, causing the deaths of many men. Keller went free and made a lot of money. The twin shadows of this catastrophe and the fact that the young Keller son was reported missing during the war dominate the action. The love affair of Chris Keller and Ann Deever, the bitterness of George Deever returned from the war to find his father in prison and his father's partner free, are all set in a structure of almost unbearable power. The climax showing the reaction of a son to his guilty father is fitting conclusion to a play electrifying in its intensity.
